

Orion Township & the Village of Lake Orion

Orion Township

Village of Lake Orion

The Village of Lake Orion began in the mid-19th century as a land promotion endeavor that featured a beautiful lake. After the Civil War and through the 1920s, it saw life as a popular Victorian summer resort and Chautauqua-like destination for the growing city of Detroit. For much of the 20th century, it remained a tranquil lake side village insulated from the major effects of urban development. Today Lake Orion remains a unique lake side residential community, yet finds itself a part of a dynamic and burgeoning suburban county in the sprawling Detroit metropolitan area.

Lake Orion, once called Lake Canandaigua, is for the most part "man-made." Prior to 1936, the lake was small, with the Paint Creek being both an inlet and an outlet. To provide adequate flow for the use of water-powered mills, a dam was constructed. Over the years, a number of different dams were constructed, as previous ones failed.

The City of Auburn Hills & the City of Pontiac

City of Pontiac

The first settlers arrived in what is now the City of Pontiac in 1818. Two years later there were enough people there to form a village named after the famous Indian Chief who had made his headquarters in the area only a few years before. The village was officially recognized by the state legislature in 1837 and it incorporated as a city in 1861. From the beginning, Pontiac's central location served it well. It attracted professional people, including doctors and lawyers, and soon also became a center of industry. The city became the location of choice for woolen and grist mills which made use of the Clinton River as a power source. With the coming of the railroad through the downtown area in 1844, Pontiac's progress and success were assured. Abundant natural resources led to the establishment of several carriage manufacturing companies. The City of Pontiac quickly became a capital of the new automotive industry.

City of Auburn Hills

The City of Auburn Hills is a proud and dynamic community with a population of approximately 20,000 people. Since its incorporation into a City in 1983, the community has experienced a rebirth of its Village Center, with an assortment of attractions including the Clinton River Trail, Clinton River, Riverside Park, River Woods Park and Skate Park. The City's Civic Center, that has preserved many features from the historic Wesson Seyburn Estate, includes an assortment of attractions including the Community Center that serves as a focal point for community activities, programs, and special events sponsored by the City. Civic Center Park offers a wealth of natural beauty and recreational opportunities. Hawk Woods Nature Center offers endless opportunities for outdoor recreational activities. This unique facility offers groomed nature trails, a marsh boardwalk, a restroom/shower facility, a picnic shelter, overnight cabin camping, and a two-story log cabin lodge.

Oakland Township

Oakland Township strives to stay beyond the reach of overcrowding, maintaining a rural setting; although culture, recreation, and shopping are nearby. The Township is firmly established as a high quality residential area containing elevated topography with views of the Paint Creek and Stony Creek Rivers. The Paint Creek Trail follows its namesake through hills, fields, woodlands, and marshes. The trail connects the Village of Lake Orion with the City of Rochester. A large part of the Bald Mountain State Recreation Area is located in the Township as well as a small portion of Stony Creek Metropark. As one of the original twenty-five townships created when the Territory of Michigan was organized in 1827, our history runs deep and can be seen in the many historical homes and by visiting Cranberry Lake Park.

Goodison

The hamlet of Goodison, located at the heart of Oakland Township, originally began as a trading post. Goodison developed as the economic, cultural, and educational center to the agrarian community. A grist mill was built in 1835 powered by Paint Creek, and operated until 1941.

The Detroit-Bay City Railroad built a line through the Paint Creek Valley and Goodison in 1872. The Railroad established a "flag" station at Goodison. The stop was named after the Goodison family who ran both the grist mill and post office at the time. The railroad provided the growing dairy and orchard industries in the Township with an efficient means of distributing their perishable products south to Detroit and north to Flint. Today Goodison is a great place to stroll quiet byways with historic homes, stores, tiny Paint Creek United Methodist Church and the Township Municipal Complex. Stop for cider and donuts, then take a hike on the Paint Creek Trail or the trails at Bear Creek Nature Park!

City of Rochester Hills

Rochester Hills provides a variety of activities including golfing, hiking, cricket, soccer, and baseball. You can bike to and through several neighboring communities using the rails to trails pathways that have been developed over the last decade. Historical sites to visit include Yates Cider Mill, the Clinton-Kalamazoo Canal and the Van Hoesen Farm. Having the third lowest tax base in Oakland County makes Rochester Hills an affordable as well as a great place to live. Access is easy from I-75 or M-59 to get to the city or to go to a sporting event or concert in the metro area, all just a short drive away. The City of Rochester Hills, in the form it is known today, was essentially created by its original layout on the section lines as Avon Township. The grid structure of the City is intersected by three natural systems: the Clinton River, Paint Creek, and Stony Creek. These natural systems provide numerous recreational and open space amenities.

City of Rochester

Rochester was settled in 1817 and drew pioneers because of its location in the Clinton River Valley - strategically located between the Clinton River and Paint Creek and Stony Creek all of which powered mills to cut timber, grind grain, card wool, and press apples into cider. The citizens of the Rochester area contributed to the development of planked roads connecting Detroit, Pontiac, Romeo, and Royal Oak, which eased farmers' access to those markets, and brought business to the villages and farms, as well as desirable manufactured goods. Later, Rochester citizens bought $50,000 in railroad stocks to ensure that rail lines ran through Rochester. These decisions assured Rochester's future as a thriving rural market town by shipping local produce and passengers out and bringing new products and business in. By 1907 there were 8 passenger and 25 freight trains stopping in Rochester every day.

Washington Township & the Village of Romeo

Washington Township

Washington Township was originally surveyed in 1816, and was subsequently organized as a township in 1827, only nine years after Macomb County was formed. At the time of its formation, Bruce and Washington Township were combined. The Township's first permanent inhabitants were from New York who settled near the Village of Romeo. While Washington Township's history is closely tied to this historic village, the township offered the wealth of natural resources that support extensive family-owned orchards some dating back over 180 years. The waterways and fertile soil yield award winning fruit production for apples, peaches, cherries and vegetables of all kinds. As farmland has turned to comfortable community living areas, more residents have moved to the township enjoying its scenic views and historic corridor along Van Dyke Road.

Village of Romeo

Romeo thrives with unique shops, restaurants, and galleries in a premier historic setting dating from the 1800's. Midwest architectural history lines the residential streets decorated in all seasons. Listed in the National Register of Historic Places and on the Michigan Register of Historic Sites, Romeo bustles as a local business center in northern Macomb County amid fruit orchards and on the recreational Macomb Orchard Trail. Home of the Michigan Peach Festival each year over Labor Day weekend, downtown Romeo showcases the best of living in southeastern Michigan. Incorporated as a village in 1838, Romeo's diverse population has been about 3,700 residents for years. Once the home of a branch of the University of Michigan in the 1840's, Romeo is still the cultural, educational and business center of the area.

Shelby Township & the City of Utica

Shelby Township

Shelby Township is a diverse community offering many historic and scenic opportunities for public enjoyment. The attractions range from bird watching and hiking through our many parks to stepping back in time to spend the day as a child in the 1871 Andrews Schoolhouse or get married in Historic Hope Chapel. Joe Louis once lived at Spring Hill Farms, where River Bends Park is currently located and you can see where the underground railroad lead slaves to safety. Visit the Packard Proving Grounds, an engineering marvel. Families can fish, skateboard, sled, play baseball, go geocaching, explore historic cemeteries or just relax at Holland Ponds. Remnants of the Clinton-Kalamazoo Canal can be viewed along 22 & 23 Mile roads in Shelby Township. Bird watching is a favored pastime while visiting Shadobush Nature Center on Ryan Road.

City of Utica

Utica is located in western central Macomb County, 12 miles north of Detroit, and 11 miles east of Pontiac. The City operates an area of approximately 1.9 square miles and has a current population of over 4,500 residents, according to the census. While settled in 1817, Utica offer its residents and visitors of today a respite from the often hectic suburban lifestyle. With its tree-lined streets, quaint historic downtown, well developed parks, and great shopping, Utica is a definite destination. From its beautiful hotels and nearby Dave & Busters to hiking along the Clinton River or kayaking and biking, Utica offers visitors much to do. Play time at Grant Park, lunch in Heritage Park, or walk through the woods in Utica Recreation Area to view the wildlife - all can be yours just a step away from the frantic pace of M-59 or Van Dyke Avenue. See the variety of historic homes, bird watch, or just come to people watch in beautiful historic Utica.

About the Clinton River Connection: Joining Creeks Area

The Clinton River Watershed is defined by five unique character areas: Gathering Waters, Joining Creeks, BlueWay Water Trails, Nautical Passages, and Great Lakes Adventures. Each area offers unique local opportunities for enjoying nature and culture. The Clinton River Connection project is a partnership between Oakland and Macomb counties, the Clinton River Watershed Council, and local municipalities to help spread the word about what makes this area both a unique destination and a great place to live.

The Joining Creeks Area of the Clinton River Watershed features the high-gradient, groundwater-fed creeks of Paint, Stony, Galloway, and Sargent that coalesce into the Clinton River and provide a high-quality trout and salmon fishery. These streams are at the heart of the Clinton River Watershed and mark the transition between the headwaters and the lower river system. The vibrant and historic downtowns of Pontiac, Auburn Hills, Rochester, Utica, and Romeo grew up around these streams as mill towns, and today continue to thrive, providing opportunities to experience local history and culture while enjoying world-class entertainment, dining, and shopping opportunities.
